

TO PREVENT THE DUMPING

Of Dirt And Refuse In The Kokosing River

Council Takes First Steps
Monday Evening

Likely That Fence Will Be Built Along River

Standards To Be Placed On Public Square

To Regulate Traffic Of Automobiles And Rigs

To prevent abuse of Kokosing river banks as a dumping ground for dirt and all manner of refuse, thereby narrowing the channel and increasing the danger of a flood, council at its regular meeting Monday evening took definite steps by instructing the city engineer to find the corporation line on South Mulberry and South Mechanic streets so that a fence may be built along there. The city solicitor was asked to consult with the engineer in view of preparing an ordinance directed against this promiscuous dumping.

Council has on numerous occasions discussed the question of the river banks being used as a dumping ground, but each time a silencer was put on any action by the doubt as to the ownership of the particular strip of land which has become the haven for numerous kinds of refuse. The abuse has continued to an alarming degree and the question of the safety of certain citizens residing along the river has become an important factor.

At Monday evening's meeting, therefore, following considerable discussion, it was decided that the city could prohibit dumping of refuse within the city limits by ordinance and the above action was accordingly taken.

As a sequence to the Stoyke-Clark automobile collision on the public square Sunday afternoon, President Banning called for suggestions from the council on some means to regulate and make traffic safe on the square, outlining his idea of having standards at the four corners and compelling automobiles to keep to the right of these.

Safety Director C. N. Williams reported that two of such standards had already been ordered with a view of trying out the system, that they would arrive shortly and would be tried out. The director made mention of the fact that his department had been considering the danger of present traffic regulations for the square for some time with the result that the use of standards was decided on, at least for a test.

As requested by the council, City Engineer Blinn reported back a grade for North Mulberry and Ring old streets and though, in the case of the former, not recommending it, stated that this was the grade desired by property owners. On motion, the city solicitor was requested to prepare ordinances establishing these grades for the two streets.

After three readings under suspension of the rules, a petition from property owners on East Burgess street between Braddock and Dorbin streets for the installation of a sanitary sewer, was referred to the sewer committee.

As the sewer committee reported favorably on the resolution of necessity for a sanitary sewer in Pennsylvania avenue, the resolution was passed. It had been carried up to final passage at a previous meeting.

A resolution declaring necessary the construction of sidewalks on certain portions of Jefferson, Cottage and Locust streets, was given three readings, under suspension of the rules, and passed by council.

That certain alleys of the west end are closed and that it will be necessary to have these open in view of sewers that will shortly be constructed in that district, prompted Councilman Sockman to move that the service director be requested to have these alleys opened up. Motion carried.

The service director was also requested to have a number of holes on Division street filled and the same charged to W. H. Hearn, on motion of Councilman Weaver. Adjourned.

WAR

Affects Guinea Pigs As Many Are Required

(Philadelphia Cor. Chicago Tribune)
War has now injected itself into the affairs of the guinea pig market, with the result that the demand for this laboratory commodity—always great even in normal times—is now so vast that the supply of these animals is far short in all sections of the country.

A dealer in guinea pigs pointed out that one Philadelphia firm alone is using on an average of 2,000 guinea pigs a week in its laboratories. "If you think that the guinea pig business is a joke," this dealer said, "just consider that the firm I refer to now has approximately 25,000 of the pigs on hand, and it is constantly crying for more."

Few persons realize that there are approximately 5,000 persons in and adjacent to Philadelphia who breed guinea pigs for profit. And dealers say that if 5,000 more persons were to get into the business and engage in it seriously and on a large scale, the market would not be glutted.

Philadelphia's principal dealer in guinea pigs has sold 54,000 of the rodents so far this year, and says he has orders for that many more that he is unable to fill.

Another thing: While the laboratories have been using many more of the cavy (guinea pigs) as a result of so many additional chemistry experiments because of the war, the war itself has stopped, in a large measure, the importation of these animals from other countries. Germany used to supply many thousands of cavy for the American market. There still are German importations, by way of Holland, but the number has been reduced greatly.

The cavy market fluctuates, like all markets, but the average prices to breeders range from 37 to 40 cents for animals weighing from five to seven ounces; 50 to 55 cents for those weighing 10 ounces, and 80 to 85 cents for the pigs weighing approximately 14 ounces.
